Ariel Solomon is growing her Albany law practice, Solomon Law Firm, to open an office in New York City, adding to existing offices in Guilderland and Washington, D.C.

Solomon's firm represents federal employees in human rights, whistleblower and discrimination cases. The firm's clients, like the federal employees, are spread across the world, so the New York City office will provide easy access for international arrivals. Solomon is hiring to staff the new office, which will open in the next six months.

The Albany Business Review sat down with Solomon for the latest installment of our series, The Interview. Watch the video below to learn more about why Solomon started her own firm at age 29, and how she hopes to grow it in the future.
