Donald Zee, Jonathan Lapper and Ariel Solomon have been selected to a national list of notable attorneys.

The Business Journals' Influencers: Law spotlights 100 executives who are having an impact on business and legal matters in communities across the nation.

Zee has had a long, prolific career as a commercial real estate attorney and is president of Donald Zee P.C. in Albany. Lapper, principal with Bartlett Pontiff Stewart & Rhodes in Glens Falls, has spent the past 32 years helping developers win approvals to transform communities. Solomon is the founding partner at Solomon Law Firm in Albany, where she represents federal employees in human rights, whistleblower and discrimination cases.

These 100 executives represent both large, nationally recognized firms and smaller, locally focused businesses. Some are long-tenured executives while others have found success relatively early in their careers. And while some might be familiar industry names and others less so, as a group nationally, these individuals are having an impact on matters of business and law in myriad areas.

These executives were identified in conjunction with editors and staff writers across The Business Journals' network of more than 40 publications, including Albany Business Review. Each has been featured as part of The Business Journals' continuing coverage of the newsmakers in those cities. These are executives to know for entrepreneurs and companies that are looking to expand their businesses to new locations or to grow further in the cities in which they're now operating.

This list follows The Business Journals' production of The Influencers: Commercial Real Estate earlier this year. That list spotlighted 100 executives who are influencing real estate and development in their respective communities.

We welcome your comments as you review these lists and learn more about each of these executives. We also know there are many other good stories to tell. We look forward to sharing those stories with you through The Business Journals down the line.
